CERTIFICATE OF MAILING UNDER 37 C.F.R. §1.8(v)

The undersigned hereby certifies that this document is being placed in the United States mail with first-class postage attached, addressed to Commissioner of Patents and Trademarks, Washington, DC 20231, on this day of March, 1995.

Ronald J. Kransdorf, Reg. 20,004

Commissioner of Patents and Trademarks
Washington, DC 20231

Sir:

RULE 132 AFFIDAVIT

I, Ronald G. Wheeland, aver as follows:

1. I have a Bachelor's degree and a Medical degree received from the University of Arizona, and professional training as indicated on the attached curriculum vitae, including residence and fellowships in dermatology and dermatopathology.

2. I am currently Professor and Chairman of the Department of Dermatology at the University of New Mexico where I am also Residency Training Program Director. I am Board certified in both dermatology and dermatopathology. I have served two terms on the Board of Directors of the American Society for Laser Medicine and Surgery (ASLMS), I have chaired the Publications Committee for ASLMS and served as Section

Chairman for plastic surgery and dermatology at the 1990 ASLMS Annual Meeting. I am also on the Board of Directors of the Association of Academic Dermatologic Surgeons, and Vice President of the American Society of Dermatologic Surgery.

3. I have done extensive research in the laser dermatology and dermatologic area and am the author of 154 publications, including 3 books and 34 book chapters, many of which relate to the fields of laser dermatology and laser dermatologic studies. Attached to this Affidavit is a full curriculum vitae listing my publications, lectures and related activities. Based on the above and attached, I believe I qualify as an expert in the laser dermatology/dermatologic areas.

4. In February, 1993, when the above-identified patent application was filed, the conventional thinking was that, in order to destroy blood vessels or some other target within a person's body, the laser used for the procedure should operate at a wavelength which is preferentially absorbed by such target. I am familiar with U.S. Patent No. 4,733,660 to Itzkan and U.S. Patent No. 5,217,455 to Tan, both of which reflect the conventional wisdom discussed above. In particular, since blood, as is shown in Fig. 2 of the above-identified application, absorbs significant energy at wavelengths below 600 nm, and is roughly two orders of magnitude less absorbent at higher wavelengths, Itzkan teaches operating at a wavelength below 600 nm for the selective necrosis of blood vessels, while leaving adjacent tissue undamaged. Similarly, Tan is concerned with destroying tattoos, and in particular, the pigment of tattoos, while achieving minimal damage to surrounding tissue. Tan therefore operates at a wavelength where the tattoo pigments are highly absorbent to maximize damage to the tattoos, but where the blood vessels are not highly absorbent so as to minimize damage to blood vessels and surrounding tissue.

5. I am also aware of the work of Rasmussen in attempting to treat psoriasis by destroying blood vessels with lasers operating substantially as taught in Itzkan. The work of Rasmussen was only partially successful. One possible reason for this lack of success could be that, because of the high absorption of blood at wavelengths below 600 nm, it was not possible using the techniques of Itzkan to achieve significant damage of blood vessels at depths much beyond 0.5 mm unless the power of the laser was so high as to cause significant surface damage to the skin; whereas destruction of blood vessels at greater depths, perhaps up to 1 mm, might be desirable for the successful treatment of psoriasis.

6. Based on my knowledge and experience, there was nothing in the art, including the Itzkan and Tan references, which suggested in February, 1993 that deep destruction of blood vessels could be accomplished with a laser without serious damage to surface cells, and in particular, there was nothing to suggest that selective destruction of blood vessels could be accomplished by use of laser energy in the 700-1100 nm range, far less that such laser energy could be utilized for the selective destruction of deep blood vessels. This being true, there was nothing to suggest fluence levels or pulse durations which might be utilized to achieve such destruction. It is therefore my opinion, based on the Itzkan patent, the Tan patent, and all other prior art known to me, that it would not have been obvious to one skilled in the art in February, 1993 that selective deep destruction of blood vessels may be achieved through use of laser energy at wavelengths between 700 nm and 1100 nm; and in particular, with such lasers pulsed and designed so as to deliver fluences at the skin surface of between 5 joules per square centimeter and 50 joules per square centimeter, and with each pulse having a pulse duration between 0.2 ms and 20 ms.
